

Regulating for Meaningful Urban Co-Production at Scale

12 March 2026
 3-5pm CET / 2-4pm GMT

This session asks:

- What is the role of regulation in opening (or closing) pathways towards more just and democratic city making in Europe?
- What can we learn from campaigns seeking to shape regulation by and for urban co-production?

Translation:

French/English, English/French translation will be available throughout the event.

Dialogues in Coproduction - Enabler Series

The Dialogues in Coproduction is an online public seminar series dedicated to the co-production of just cities. Our ambition is to help consolidate an international community of practice interested in exploring and learning from real-life experiments addressing the growing social, spatial, environmental and political inequalities in our cities. The Dialogues in Coproduction are open to residents, activists, academics and professionals, alongside other actors from civil society organisations and local governments.

The Enablers Series focuses on the conditions that enable meaningful co-production to develop and to shape the production of practices, policies, plans, services and places that communities push for. Beyond co-learning and networking purposes, the series aims to help in the formulation of consolidated demands and propositions to strengthen coproduction practices in the wider European region (and beyond).

Upcoming Enablers Series sessions include:

- 4: Defending Meaningful Urban Co-production (16 April 2026, 3-5pm CET / 2-4pm GMT);
- 5: Enabling Meaningful Urban Co-production at Scale – Key Learnings (September 2026, date and time TBC)

About the Fairville project

The Fairville project is an international and collaborative research project funded by Horizon Europe (EU's funding programme for research and innovation) for the period 2023-2026. The project intends to address embedded urban inequalities and the challenge they raise to democracy in large cities and urban regions. It does so by supporting co-production and bottom-up collaboration engaging citizens collectives in low-income neighbourhoods. The project uses participatory action-research and the co-production of knowledge as strategies of spatial justice to address urban inequalities affecting cities, mainly in Europe, but also in Africa. The research project is based in eight Fairville Labs, mostly linked to citizen-led initiatives run by local groups partnering in the project. The Labs are located in Athens, Berlin, Brussels, Cairo, Dakar, London and Marseille.

About [Re]claiming Co-Produced Housing Europe

The [Re]claiming Co-Produced Housing Europe Dialogues is a knowledge exchange series facilitated by The Bartlett Development Planning Unit (DPU), Habitat International Coalition (HIC), and the Global Platform for the Right to the City (GPR2C) with Fairville. The dialogue series aims to translate grassroots learnings into actionable policy recommendations for embedding and scaling affordable, sustainable, co-produced housing across Europe, specifically leveraging the momentum around the elaboration of the recently launched European Affordable Housing Plan (EAPH). It is funded by UCL's HEIF Knowledge Exchange and Innovation Fund.
